

Our kids can't afford broken promises and FAILED EDUCATION POLICIES

Gov. Deal's "Opportunity School District" bill pushes the same failed policies that destroyed public education and undermined students in New Orleans.

Real opportunity for Georgia's students means giving schools the resources and supports kids need to overcome barriers to success.

Under the governor's plan, the state would take over management of low-performing local schools—a move that has failed again and again in states like Louisiana and Michigan. Why are politicians pushing these bungled reform efforts on schools that primarily serve minority, low-income students?

The evidence shows top-down approaches, like state takeovers, just don't work!

- State takeovers have failed to improve student achievement. In New Orleans, Gov. Deal's model, student achievement continues to be near the bottom of all the parishes in Louisiana. What's more, state-run schools in Louisiana and Michigan had disproportionately high suspension and expulsion rates.
- State takeovers get rid of local control and accountability. There is less direct public accountability in state-run districts. Parents, educators and community members should have a say in decisions that affect the schools our children attend.
- State takeovers encourage charter school expansion. Like New Orleans, Georgia's Opportunity School District legislation would hand neighborhood schools over to charter companies. Many charter schools:
 - Exclude certain students—especially those with special needs and disabilities, and those from low-income families—by using selective admissions criteria. Charters tend to “re-segregate” schools.
 - Sidestep many standards that govern neighborhood public schools.
